FOREWORD

Since its publication in 2007, Communio has been welcomed and well used by scholas and cantors. Clearly, a collection of its kind, dedicated to a single, relatively accessible genre of the Gregorian repertoire, was needed to inspire more than a few nascent forays into Latin chant, and, one hopes, to begin the restoration of the Church's glorious treasure of plainsong to the regular liturgical life of our parishes. By making Psalm verses easily available, the collection enables a fuller singing of the Communion ritual using these otherwise relatively simple chants.

In retrospect, including Psalm verses in Latin only may have been a leap, rather than a step. Some have found the use of exclusively Latin song resisted in their particular congregations in no uncertain terms. In order to both encourage the reception of Latin chant, and to provide the sort of edification our congregations tend to demand (one of the better fruits of the liturgical movement, it seems to me), a better bridge is needed.

This alternative version of Communio attempts such a bridge by providing the authentic Communion chants, as in the original, but accompanied by Psalm verses in English. To expedite the adaptation process, and to avoid inevitable copyright conundrums, I have used the translations found in the original Communio, which follow the Douay-Rheims, whose archaic treatment of the English seems a more gratifying accompaniment to the Latin chant. (Some may disagree, and are certainly free to use another translation, adapting the psalmtones accordingly.)

Whereas the original Communio used the Introit tones for the Latin verses, in this collection I have employed the simpler, more regular tones of the Divine Office, as found in the Liber usualis. Years of experience have taught me these tones are much more reliable (if not exactly foolproof) for singing English psalmody. Below, I outline in a cursory way my approach to adapting the rhythm of the tones to the cadence of the English texts (no doubt, in a way guaranteed to annoy anyone versed in this daunting, and ultimately eccentric, process). I have tried to keep my method as true to the original formulas as possible, mirroring their graceful flexibility, with no thought to the rigorous, often complex rhythmic systems employed by other (probably more enlightened) adaptors.

Also to expedite the process, I have notated the English verses using a system of pointing. Probably the premiere rationale for the original Communio was to provide verses with their music written out in full. I understand how important this is for beginning chanters. On the other hand, I cannot overstate what a project it makes of the engraver's task. Furthermore, the chanting of psalmody (indeed, of any liturgical text) demands an ability to sing from pointed texts. Our ongoing search for the definitive English translation of the liturgy alone requires it, as does the use of many existing resources, including those from other Christian traditions. It is, in short, a requisite skill of liturgical musicians, well worth the patient effort needed to master.

I have kept the translations of the Communion chants themselves, but have given them the pointing necessary to be sung, perhaps as a last verse. It may well be that congregations will more readily open themselves to the Latin original if they are able to hear what the words mean. On the other hand, for less-poetical Biblical texts, such as those from the New Testament, versification does not always help their understandability, and a written translation provided in a worship aid might be the better way to go.

While I have used the verses given in the original, I have limited their selection to those which, along with the Communion chant, could fit comfortably on a single page. This should provide a roughly uniform amount of music, with the requisite repetitions of the chant. (While I admire the enthusiasm of those who would sing all the verses listed in the Graduale Romanum, I can't imagine it in practice. Surely, we want to impress our people with the beauty of these chants, not with their potential tedium! For a protracted Communion rite, I would advocate a judicious use of alius cantus aptus instead.) Rather than try to edit the original reference, I have given only book and chapter, without specifying the verses I chose.

While the original Communio was suitable for both the Ordinary and Extraordinary Forms of the Roman Rite, English verses are not appropriate for the Extraordinary Form. I have therefore removed the liturgical index for the 1962 Missal. However, I have left the few Communion chants unique to the Sundays of that Missal, on the off chance they can be used elsewhere (possibly ad libitum) in the Ordinary Form of the Rite. The collection remains selective, and incomplete for all the possibilities given in the modern Graduale Romanum—lacunae easily enough remedied by anyone who has mastered the method found in this collection.

ADAPTING PSALMTONES FOR ENGLISH TEXTS

This will be necessarily a brief overview of my approach to adapting English texts to Office psalmtones. A proper defense requires a thesis beyond the scope of these pages. Others have given detailed analyses of the problem, some of which can be found through the CMAA website [www.MusicaSacra.com]. My own system stems from regularly singing the Divine Office in Latin, together with two decades experimenting with various ways to adapt the Office formulas to English text. While I would like to report a clear, clean, and consistent system for such adaptation, twenty years later I am convinced that such a system does not exist. On the other hand, despite relying heavily on my own intuitive musicality, I feel reasonably confident that my approach does justice to the spirit of the Latin, as it appears in the Liber usualis and Antiphonale monasticum, without offending the vernacular texts being set.

For this collection, I have limited my choice of psalmtones to the standard eight modes, and my choice of termination cadences to a single one per mode. (Some chants use a transposed version of the mode, which is reflected in the accompanying psalmtone.) Furthermore, I have avoided the use of a flex by selecting verses that do not require an intermediate cadence. (For longer phrases, especially with intervening punctuation, a slight pause on the recitation seems adequate.)

Verse formulas have two parts, corresponding to their two cadences: mediation and termination. Both cadences are preceded by an expandable recitation that receives the bulk of the text (but may be as short as a single syllable). For the standard eight modes, the reciting tone is the same for both halves of the formula.

The first verse begins with a fixed intonation formula, which carries the first two syllables of the text. The intonation is used for the first verse sung following the Communion antiphon, and after each of its repetitions. Subsequent verses begin immediately on the recitation. (In this collection, the majority of verses come in pairs, though occasionally I use a group of three, and rarely a single verse as the last. Single, double, or triple, only the first verse following the Communion antiphon uses the intonation.)

Cadential formulas employ accents, tones that mark a movement in the melodic formula, which tend to correspond to an accented syllable in the text or, in many cases, a secondary or presumed accent. However, formula accents may or may not correspond to the musical ictus, a discussion beyond the scope of this introduction.

Formulas accommodate up to two subsequent or intervening unaccented syllables, with auxiliaries (hollow notes) used only as needed. Where the accent falls on a clivis (Mode III), the auxiliary is placed before the regular accent, and itself receives the accent when used (see example below).

Other cadential notes, or groups of notes (neumes) are used as preparatory tones, and carry one, two, or three syllables preceding the (first) accent. Each preparatory tone receives a single syllable, whether accented or unaccented.

For a more complete discussion of accents, auxiliaries, and preparatory tones, read the descriptions of chanting the Psalms in the Liber usualis and Antiphonale monasticum (or translations in other chant manuals). Indeed, there is no better way to master the method than chanting the Latin psalmody found in these venerable collections.

GROUPING AND DIVIDING THE VERSES

The original Communio follows the custom of singing a single verse, followed by a repetition of the Communion chant. When applied to English verses on a simple psalmtone, the result seems rather terse. Instead, I have grouped the verses in pairs, much like the modern Responsorial Psalm. In a few cases, I have grouped three verses, and only rarely have used a single verse, usually as the last. Groups are numbered and divided under each half of the psalmtone, and the Communion chant is repeated after each numbered group:

- 1a* Shout with joy to God, all the earth, *
sing ye a psalm to his name; give glory to his praise.
- 1b* Say unto God, How terrible are thy works, O Lord! *
in the multitude of thy strength thy enemies shall lie to thee.
- 2a* Let all the earth adore thee, and sing to thee: *
let it sing a psalm to thy name.
- 2b* Come and see the works of God: *
who is terrible in his counsels over the sons of men.

is notated, with psalmtone:

- 1. Shout with joy to God, |all the earth,
Say unto God, How terrible are thy |works, O Lord!
- 2. Let all the earth adore thee, and |sing to thee:
Come and see the |works of God:

- 1. sing ye a psalm to his name; give |glo-ry to his praise.
in the multitude of thy strength thy ene-|mies shall lie to thee.
- 2. let it sing a |psalm to thy name.
who is terrible in his counsels |o-ver the sons of men.

and is sung:

- 1. Shout with joy to God, |all the earth, sing ye a psalm to his name; give |glo-ry to his praise. Say un-to God, How ter-ri-ble are thy |works, O Lord! in the mul-ti-tude of thy strength thy

en- e-|mies shall lie to thee. [repeat Communion chant]

2. Let all the earth a-dore thee, and |sing to thee: etc.

POINTING THE TEXT

I indicate with a vertical slash | the point in the text where the recitation ends and the cadential formula (mediation or termination) begins. From that point, each syllable receives a single note or two-note group (podatus, with the bottom note sung first, or clivis). If the text requires it, the syllable marked in italics receives an auxiliary note (indicated by a hollow punctum in the psalm-tone). Cadences of two accents may require two auxiliary notes.

I have not specially marked syllables sung on the intonation, except to hyphenate the syllables that take separate notes. The intonation is used for the first of each group of verses, after each repetition of the Communion chant. Subsequent verses begin directly on the recitation.

In cases where there were not enough syllables to take the full formula, I indicate the omission in the text (- - -). For first verses, this invariably means to skip the intonation, and begin on the recitation. For other verses, and when followed by a |, it means to skip the recitation, and begin immediately on the cadential formula. For example:

1. - - - Have mer-|cy on me, O God,
To my hearing thou shalt give |joy and glad-ness

is sung:

I. Have mer-|cy on me, O God, etc.

and:

Mode VI

I. - - - |whom shall I fear?
of whom |shall I be a-fraid?

is sung:

|whom shall I fear? etc.

I have pointed the translation of the Communion chant itself using the same system. I have marked half verses (following the mediation) with the traditional asterisk *, and have divided some longer texts into two verses, using a backslash \.

REALIZING CADENTIAL FORMULAS

1. Cadences of one accent (mediation of modes II, V, and VIII) are the easiest to sing at sight:

I. I have believed, therefore have I |spo-ken:
I said in |my ex-cess:

2. What shall I render |to the Lord,
I will take the chalice of sal-|va-tion;

is sung:

I. I have be-lieved, there-fore have I |spo-ken:

I said in | my ex-cess: [thus is the word accented when used as a noun]

2. What shall I ren-der | to the Lord,

I will take the chal-ice of sal-|va-tion;

2. Cadences of one accent with one, two, or three preparatory syllables (mediation of modes IV and VI; termination of modes I, II, III, IV, VI, and VIII) are not much more difficult:

2. He scourged you for | your in-iq-ui-ties,
He will gather you from | all the Gen-tiles

2. but will again | have mer-cy on you all.
among whom | you have been scat-tered.

is sung:

2. He scourged you for | your in- iq- ui-ties, but will a- gain | have

mer-cy on you all. He will gath-er you from | all the Gen-tiles

a-mong whom | you have been scat-tered.

3. Cadences of two accents (mediation of modes I, III, and VII; termination of modes V and VII) take more care to navigate the two possible auxiliaries:

I. The des-ert and the | parched land will ex-ult;
The glory of Lebanon will be | giv-en to them,

I. the | steppe will re-joyce and bloom.
the splendor of | Car-mel and Shar-on.

is sung:

I. The des-ert and the | parched land will ex-ult; the | steppe will re-joyce and bloom. The glo-ry of Le-ba-non will be | giv-en to them, the splen-dor of | Car-mel and Shar-on.

Notice the four ways you can realize a cadence of two accents: 1) with no auxiliaries (“giv-en to them”); 2) with only the first auxiliary (“Car-mel and Shar-on”); 3) with only the second auxiliary (“parched land will ex-ult”); and 4) with both auxiliaries (“steppe will re-joyce and bloom”). Recognizing these patterns at sight will take practice, and beginners may need to make additional, personally meaningful marks in the text to absorb the system (such as marking the second moving note after the auxiliary).

4. The mediation of Mode III is also a cadence of two accents, but its second accent is treated in a special way, as the following example demonstrates:

I. I will bless the | Lord at all times,
 In the | Lord shall my soul be praised;

The second of the two accents is normally carried by the two-note group (clivis):

I will bless the | Lord at all times,

But in order to accommodate an extra syllable, the accent is moved to the auxiliary preceding the clivis, and the clivis itself becomes unaccented:

In the | Lord shall my soul be praised;

The same phrase in Mode VII would be sung:

In the | Lord shall my soul be praised;

So in both modes, the word “soul” receives the second accent; but in Mode III, it is italicized to indicate that it receives the auxiliary before the two-note clivis. This phenomenon of Mode III occurs just enough to be confusing, and will require special care and attention before it begins to feel natural.

MUSICAL AND TEXTUAL ACCENTS

Latin textual accents are significantly more regular than those of English. Consequently, one must think differently about accents when singing the Gregorian formulas in the vernacular. In fact, the term accent has been responsible for a great deal of confusion when applied to the chanting of psalmody. Let’s be clear: In the context of psalmtones, accent refers to a point of movement, rather than any sort of quantitative emphasis or vocal stress. In the Liber and other classic sources, the (first) accent mark is used to indicate the upward movement of the melodic formula. Now, in a real sense, this upward movement does, in fact, constitute a sort of quantitative emphasis. Some suggest this reflects the various metrical schemes of classical poetry, which employed some sort of quantitative emphasis. But such emphasis would have been in the order of pitch (a heightening of the voice) or length (stretching the accented syllable). It almost certainly had nothing to do with the sort of accent we associate with modern music, which mostly involves loudness.

However accent was conceived in classical poetry, and however that might relate to Gregorian psalmtones, one thing is clear: The Gregorian formulas accommodate the Latin accent in a direct and complementary way. (This assumes you accept the idea of Latin textual accent at all, and don't dismiss it as a late-medieval imposition on the classical language.) At least as it has been practiced in the Church for centuries, Gregorian psalmtones and Latin accents go together with a remarkable degree of complement.

The same cannot be said when the tones are applied to English. Here, the idea of accent has to be very subtly understood, and the singer must treat the psalmtone cadences with extreme flexibility, adjusting his rhythmic understanding of the melodies for virtually each new line of English text he sings. In my opinion, anything more becomes an unwieldy and convoluted system (adding more auxiliaries, dividing two-note groups, etc.) which defies comprehension (short of writing out all the music). On the other hand, anything less becomes an oversimplification, a tendency to sing the psalmtone accents with no regard for, and to the general deformation of, the English text.

Especially when applied to English texts, Gregorian psalmtones provide a melodic framework, whose realized rhythm (and, to some extent, whose metricality) must depend first and foremost on the text being sung. (This might sound strange, coming from a partisan of the classic Solesmes-Mocquereau system of chant rhythm. But Mocquereau never advocated the musical rhythm at the expense of the text; rather, for him, it was the seemingly independent, yet amazingly complementary, rhythms of music and text that together comprise the Gregorian art. When it comes to chanting psalmody, the modest rhythms of the simple melodies must necessarily bow to a sensitive declamation of the text.)

SOME METRICAL EXAMPLES

To see how this works in practice, take the following examples. (I am setting aside the question of chironomy and the placement of the rhythmic ictus, which is not the focus here.)

1. A simple, regular cadence is easy to sing because it corresponds most closely with our modern sense of meter:

What shall I ren-der | to the Lord,
might be transcribed:

What shall I ren-der | to the Lord,

2. Taking away the auxiliary makes the rhythm less regular, but still negotiable:

I will take the chal-ice of sal-|va-tion;

I will take the chal-ice of sal - | va - tion,

3. The problem comes when the textual rhythm is noticeably less regular:

For who is God | but the Lord? God who hath girt me | with strength,

For who is God | but the Lord?

God who has girt me | with strength,

In the first phrase, I would sing a slight tenuto on “God” to compensate for the moving note that follows. (Moving on “but” makes better sense to me than moving on “the”.) In the second phrase, the moving note loses its sense of accent altogether, and becomes part of the penultimate rhythm. (This rhythm happens frequently, and I have tried to be consistent when pointing it...unless another option sounded better to me.)

Of course, some people solve the problem by taking advantage of the rhythmic concession for treating final single-syllable words, by which one ends on the moving note of the mediant:

For who is God but the | Lord? God who hath girt me with | strength,
I find this very unsatisfying, if only because what is rare in the Latin (or Hebrew, which is frequently the single-syllable word in question) becomes positively pandemic in the English, if used consistently. It makes the psalmtone unnecessarily ambiguous to my ear.

4. Rhythmic difficulty is multiplied when the cadential formula includes a second accent. Here is our Mode VII example above realized:

The musical notation consists of four lines of music in a treble clef with a key signature of one sharp (F#). The lyrics are written below the notes. The first line has a bar line after 'The' and another after 'strength,'. The second line has a bar line after 'the' and another after 'bloom.'. The third line has a bar line after 'them,'. The fourth line has a bar line after 'of' and another after 'on.'.

The__ des - ert and the | parched land will ex - ult;
the | steppe will re - joice and bloom.
The glo-ry of Le-ba-non will be|giv-en to them,
the splen-dor of | Car-mel and Shar-on.

Is it necessary to resort to such arbitrary mixed meters using bar-lines? Those who transcribe chant into modern notation rarely do, although many preserve a sense of the rhythmic groupings by beaming the eighth notes. But notwithstanding an equalist approach, psalmtone recitation demands some sort of mental organization that is at least subliminally perceptible to the listener. It needn't be the stylized declamation of the stage (much less the sort of quasi-metrical rendering one hears from the mensuralist school of chant rhythm), but neither should it be the mechanical hammering out of equal notes.

What this example should demonstrate is that cadential formulas of two accents do not necessarily correspond to two word accents; rather, they indicate two points of melodic movement that must be rendered rhythmically. In the third phrase, the first moving note is on the first syllable of "given", a clear textual accent; however, the second moving note is on the word "to", in this case clearly not a textual accent. The realized rhythm, rather than remaining strictly two accents, becomes instead a compound rhythm that maintains the integrity of the melody, while easily accommodating the textual cadence. Barlines and beams help modern musicians see how the two—music and text—interact to create a musical, rather than a mechanical, expression.

It is up to the singer to realize this subtle interplay of music and text, whenever he chants a Psalm on a musical formula, but especially when that Psalm is in English. Sensitive declamation of the text, an essential part of any chant rehearsal, must be the first step in reading, absorbing, and rendering pointed psalmody. Our calling and duty demand it. In all aspects of liturgical singing, but especially in our singing of the Psalms, we must move beyond the role of a soloist enamored of his own voice, and take up the role of a psalmist in love with the Church's liturgical texts.

It was fit that we should make merry | and be glad: * for this thy brother was dead and is come to life again; he was | lost, and is found.

1. Bless-ed are they whose iniquities are for-|giv-en, Blessed is the man to whom
the Lord hath not im-|put-ed sin,
2. Be-cause I was silent my |bones grew old,
I have acknowledged my |sin to thee,
3. I said I will confess against myself my injustice |to the Lord:
I will give thee understanding, and I will instruct thee
in this way in which |thou shalt go;
4. Man-y are the scourges of the |sin-ner,
Be glad in the Lord, and re-|joice, ye just;

nor will I |suf-fer my truth to fail.
and the words that proceed
from my |mouth I will not make void.

Mt 4: 19, 20

y. Ps 118

VIII

V E-ní-te post me: * fá- ci- am vos pisca-tó-res hómi- num: at il- li, re-líctis ré-ti- bus et na- vi, se-cú-ti sunt Dómi- num.

Come ye after me, and I will make you to be fishers |of men; * and they immediately, leaving their nets and boats, |fol-lowed the Lord.

1. Bless-ed are the undefiled in |the way,
My soul hath |cov-et-ed
2. Be-hold I have longed after thy |pre-cepts:
And I lifted up my hands to thy commandments, which |I loved:
3. Thou hast done well with thy servant, |O Lord,
How sweet are thy words to my |pal-ate!
4. My soul hath kept thy testi-|mo-nies:
I have longed for thy salvation, |O Lord:

1. who walk in the |law of the Lord.
to long for thy justifi-|ca-tions, at all times.
2. quicken me |in thy jus-tice.
and I was exercised in thy jus-|ti-fi-ca-tions.
3. ac-|cording to thy word.
more than |hon-ey to my mouth.
4. and hath loved |them ex-ceed-ing-ly.
and thy |law is my de-light.

Jn 11: 33, 35, 43, 44, 39

γ. Ps 129

I
V I-dens Dómi-nus * flentes so-ró-res Lá-za-ri ad mo-numén-tum, lacrimá-tus est co-ram Judæ- is, et clamá-bat:
Lá-za- re, ve-ni fo- ras: et pród- i- it li-gá-tis má-ni-bus et pé-di-bus, qui fú- e- rat quatri-du- á-nus mór- tu- us.

When the Lord saw the sisters of Lazarus |weep-ing at the tomb, * he wept in the |pres-ence of the Jews, \ and cried out: |La-za-rus, come forth; * and he came forth, bound hands and feet, who had been |four days in the tomb.

1. Out of the depth I have |cried to thee, O Lord:
Let thy |ears be at-ten-tive
2. If thou, O Lord, wilt |mark in-iq-ui-ties:
For with thee there is merci-|ful for-give-ness:
3. Let the watchman |count on day-break,
Because with the |Lord there is mer-cy:
And he |shall re-deem Is-ra-el

1. - - - |Lord, hear my voice.
to the voice of my |sup-pli-ca-tion.
2. Lord, |who shall stand it?
- - - |where-fore thou art feared.
3. and Israel |hope in the Lord.
and with him plenti-|ful re-demp-tion.
from all |his in-iq-ui-ties.

Ps 97: 3

I
V I-dé- runt omnes * fi-nes ter- ræ sa-lutá- re De- i nostri.
 - - All the |ends of the earth have seen * the sal-|va-tion of our God.

1. Sing ye to the |Lord a new can-ti-cle:
 His right hand hath wrought for |him sal-va-tion,
2. The Lord hath made |known his sal-va-tion:
 He hath remembered his |mer-cy and his truth
3. Sing joy-fully to |God, all the earth:
 Sing praise to the |Lord on the harp,
4. With long trumpets, and |sound of cor-net,
 Let the sea be moved and the |full-ness there-of:
5. The riv-ers shall clap their hands, the mountains shall rejoice together at the |pres-ence of the Lord:
 He shall judge the |world with jus-tice,

1. because he hath done |won-der-ful things.
 and his |arm is ho-ly.
2. he hath revealed his justice in the sight |of the Gen-tiles.
 toward the |house of Is-ra-el.
3. make melo-|dy, re-joyce and sing.
 on the harp, and with the |voice of a psalm.
4. make a joyful noise be-|fore the Lord our king.
 the world and |they that dwell there-in.
5. because he com-|eth to judge the earth.
 and the peo-|ple with eq-ui-ty.

cf Mt 2: 2

y. Ps 71

IV

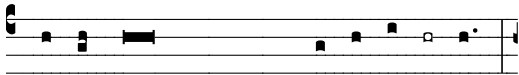

I- di- mus * stel-lam e-jus in O-ri- énte, et vé-nimus cum muné-ri- bus ado-rá-re Dómi- num.

We have seen his |star in the east, * and are |come to a-dore the Lord.

1. Give to the king thy |judg-ment, O God:
To judge thy peo-|ple with jus-tice,
2. Let the mountains receive peace |for the peo-ple:
In his days shall |jus-tice spring up,
3. And he shall |rule from sea to sea,
The kings of Tharsis and the islands shall |of-fer pres-ents:
4. And all kings of the earth |shall a-dore him:
For he shall deliver the poor |when they cry out:
5. Let his name be |bless'd for ev-er-more:
And in him shall all the tribes |of the earth be bless'd:
Blessed be the Lord, the |God of Is-ra-el,

1. and to the |king's son thy jus-tice.
and |thy poor with judg-ment.
2. - - - |and the hills jus-tice.
and abundance of peace, till the moon |be tak-en a-way.
3. and from the river unto |the ends of the earth.
the kings of the Arabians and of |Sa-ba shall bring gifts.
4. all |na-tions shall serve him.
and the needy |that had no help-er.
5. his name contin-|u-eth be-fore the sun.
all nations |shall mag-ni-fy him.
who alone |doth won-der-ful things.

Mt 17: 9

y. Ps 44

I
V I-si- ó-nem * quam vi- dístis, némi-ni di-xé- ritis, do-nec a mórtu- is re-súrgat Fí- li- us hómi-nis.
 --- Tell the |vi-sion to no man * until the Son of man be |ris-en from the dead.

1. My heart hath |ut-tered a good word,
 Thou art beautiful above the sons of men,
 grace is poured a-|broad in thy lips;
2. Gird thy sword upon thy thigh, O |thou most might-y,
 Proceed |pros-per-ous-ly and reign,
3. And thy right hand shall conduct thee |won-der-ful-ly:
 Thy throne, O God, is for |ev-er and ev-er;
4. Thou hast loved justice, and |hat-ed in-iq-ui-ty,
 They shall re-|mem-ber thy name

1. I speak my |works to the king.
 therefore hath God bless'd |thee for ev-er.
2. with thy comeliness and thy |beau-ty set out.
 because of truth and meek-|ness and jus-tice.
3. thy arrows are sharp, under |thee shall peo-ple fall.
 the scepter of thy kingdom is a scepter |of up-right-ness.
4. therefore God, thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness a-|bove thy fel-lows.
 throughout all |gen-e-ra-tions.

Ps 75: 12,13

II
V Ové-te, *et réddi-te Dómi- no De- o ve-stro, omnes qui in circú- i-tu e-jus affér- tis múne- ra: terrí-bi- li, et e- i qui aufert spí-ri-tum prín- cipum: terrí- bi-li a- pud omnes re- ges ter- ræ.

Make vows to the Lord, your God, and ful-|fill them; * let all round about
 Him bring gifts to the ter-|ri-ble Lord \ who checks the pride of |prin-ces, *
 Who is terrible to the kings |of the earth.

1. In Ju-dea |God is known:
 And his place is |in peace:
2. There hath he broken the |pow'rs of bows,
 Thou enlightenest wonderfully from the ever-|last-ing hills.
3. Thou hast caused judgment to be heard from |heav-en:
 When God arose in |judg-ment,

1. his name is great |in Is-ra-el.
 and his abode |in Si-on.
2. the shield, the sword, and |the bat-tle.
 All the foolish of heart |were trou-bled.
3. the earth trem-|bled and was still.
 to save all the meek |of the earth.
